

This is a subject to be approached with caution considering the season. However, George V. Keith the barber told me that his small granddaughter cut short an angry outburst, assumed a contrite pose, and asked, "Is Santa Claus looking?"

Which moved grandpa to tell me that sometimes he wondered if the various buildups adults use on children don't do more harm than good. It was suggesting the not unfamiliar thought that when tiny tots finally know all there is to be known they are apt to become cynical.

But man is a believing animal. From the cradle to the grave, you can figure a percentage will turn out to be cynics, but the percentage is surprisingly small. The truth is, a cynic is a dreadful bore. People leave him so severely alone that he either mends his ways or becomes a hard-headed recluse and mercifully drops out of sight and mind.

Who started this Santa Claus business anyway? Critics of the idea are always assuming it began with the adults, but you don't build up a thriving enterprise without customer demand — plenty of it.

I pointed out to my friend Keith that invariably a youngster's first request is to tell him a story and whether it's a true story is a secondary matter. If he wants to argue the point, then he's too old to be fooling around with stories — tell him he ought to read a book. That'll put him back in a listening mood — but fast!

Of course there is a bribery angle to this pre-Christmas season, but if it gets complicated you can always straighten matters out with a counter-attack. I recall a story the late Heywood Brown wrote in his famous column "It Seems to Me" for the old New York World back in the 1920's. It was like this:

Brown being a morning-paper worker never got home until the wee hours and so he was a late sleeper. On this particular day his small son was beating a drum and the dozing papa heard mama say: "If you don't quit making that noise you won't go to heaven."

Brown rose up in bed and answered Mrs. Brown with: "Why make matters worse by telling me a story?"

"Then you hannaie it," said Mrs. Brown frostily.

"I will," replied the head of the house. "Come here, son. The reason you are going to quit beating that drum is that I am bigger than you and if you don't quit beating it I am going to spank the daylight out of you."

So you see, young Brown would have been better off believing his mother's story because the alternative was an unpleasant truth from his father.

Last Friday America's most famous playwright died in Boston — Eugene O'Neill, 65. He had won the Pulitzer prize three times, in 1920, 1922, and 1928; and in 1936 took the world-wide Nobel prize.

Nevertheless much of the intellectualism that brought him world fame was lost on his countrymen, including myself — and I saw three of his plays performed by top actors. I was in New York when the late Pauline Lord appeared in "Anna Christie," which won O'Neill his first Pulitzer award. And I saw his first Pulitzer award. And I saw his first Pulitzer award.

"Late Louis Wolheim do the No. 2 O'Neill show, 'The Hairy Ape.' Both plays had a difficult time surviving, 'papering the house' for weeks — I saw both on Columbia university passes.

The third show, "Emperor Jones," starring the great Negro actor the late Charles Gilpin, played at the University of Missouri the winter of 1922-23 — and it was probably the most successful financially of O'Neill's early works. And I liked it the best of the three. I paid for that one.

O'Neill had a great though mystic talent. And he was a complete master of stagecraft. "Emperor Jones," the story of an ex-pullman-car porter who left civilization to rule an island, was done to the accompaniment of a jungle drum which started as a whisper but rose steadily through the play until it ended in tragic fury.

In "The Hairy Ape" O'Neill was confronted by the problem of showing the audience just how the fashionable people of New York's Fifth Avenue looked to a fore-caste sailor on shore leave. O'Neill managed this by having the sailor (The Hairy Ape) walk about the stage naturally while the Fifth Avenue fashion plates moved in the stiff mechanical rhythm of toy soldiers. It was a sensational idea — and it put the play across.

The greatness of O'Neill's talent is proved not only by the praise of the more erudite critics but the fact that his plays were caught after by the finest actors regardless of financial reward or the lack of it. Lord, Wolheim, Gilpin and who stalked the tragic stage, and spoke O'Neill's mystic lines, and who, like their author, are now dead and gone.

75 Ex-Federal Workers Linked With Commies

By WILLIAM F. ARBOGAST

WASHINGTON, (AP) — At least 75 former federal employees, including several attached to congressional committees, have been the subject of testimony on alleged Communist activities given Senate or House Committees during the last five years.

Another, Judith Coplon, a former Justice Department clerk, was convicted of espionage but the conviction was set aside on a technicality and there has been no retrial. She now is free.

Only two of those whose cases were spotlighted by congressional investigations have been sentenced to prison—both on perjury charges. His, former State Department official, and William Walter Remington, former Commerce Department economist.

There is no way of knowing who has been questioned, may have been guilty of some legal offense. Even if enough supporting evidence could have been gathered, prosecution on espionage charges would have been barred in many cases by a three-year limit on the time in which charges could be brought.

Membership in the Communist party—even if it could be proved—is not in itself illegal, although a number of top Communist leaders have been convicted of violating the Smith Act, which fixes penalties for conspiring to teach and advocate the overthrow of the government by force.

Most of the others either denied having been connected with Communist underground operations or refused to answer questions on the ground the Fifth Amendment to the constitution protected them.

Two have died: Harry Dexter White and Harold Ware.

At the time of their alleged activity in the interest of the Communist party, most of those named in the hearings were on government payrolls.

Accusations against most of them were made by Whitaker Chambers and Elizabeth Bentley, confessed ex-Communists, in hearings before the House un-American Activities Committee and the Senate Internal Security subcommittee in 1948.

Court Ruling Could Be Disastrous

EARLE (AP) — An Arkansas education official says it would be disastrous in this state if the U. S. Supreme Court rules an immediate end to the U. S. Supreme Court rules an immediate end to segregation in public schools.

"If you try to put Negroes into white schools particularly in east Arkansas, it won't be good," added Marvin Bird of Earle, chairman of the Arkansas State Board of Education.

Bird's comment this week-end came in connection with U. S. Atty. Gen. Herbert Brownell's opinion that the high court has the power to eliminate racial segregation in schools.

"I hope Arkansas will be given isn't that drastic," said Bird. "I hope Arkansas will be given an opportunity to put into operation its plan to equalize Negro and White schools."

Bird said he agreed with a statement by Gov. Francis Cherry that the state will abide by whatever decision is handed down by the high court.

Boyle Believes You Have to Hand It to Women — They Are Smarter Than Bears or People

By HAL BOYLE

HOMETOWN, U. S. A. (AP) — "Bears are smarter than people," said Wilbur Peeble, America's tiredest tired businessman.

His wife Trellis Mae, went on working her crossword puzzle. Wilbur cleared his throat noisily. Trellis Mae stifled a yawn, wrote in a word in the puzzle, place it in hook her head, then erased it. Wilbur opened his mouth and began to shout, "Bears are—"

"Smarter than people," finished Trellis Mae. "Don't raise your voice. I heard you, dear." "But you didn't ask me why bears are smarter than people," complained Wilbur. "I don't have to."

"Why don't you have to?" "Because I know what you would say."

"All right," said Wilbur. "What would I say?"

Dulles, Ike in Huddle on Cold War

By WARREN ROGERS JR.

WASHINGTON, (AP) — President Eisenhower, back from his Thanksgiving holiday and priming for the Big Three parley in Bermuda Dec. 4, huddles today with Secretary of State Dulles on the Soviet's latest cold war move.

The big problem is how to respond to the Russian bid for a meeting with the United States, Britain and France. The bid was regarded as a drive aimed at crumbling the West's planned European defense army—if not Western unity in the bargain.

Eisenhower flew into Washington last night aboard the presidential plane Columbine from Augusta, Ga., where he had spent a six-day Thanksgiving holiday. The plane had stopped en route at Ft. Benning, Ga., to en route Maj. and Mrs. John Eisenhower and their three children to their home.

On his last day in Augusta, the president attended church services, got in a final round of golf and dropped a hint as to where he might spend Christmas. As he boarded the plane for Washington, he told those who had come to see him off: "I hope I'll be back for Christmas."

U. S. Order to Hold River Bridge

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — A federal order is to be issued today preventing Crittenden County from dismantling the old Harahan Bridge across the Mississippi River near West Memphis, Ark., for scrap.

U. S. Asst. Dist. Atty. Gerland P. Patton of Little Rock, who announced that the order had been prepared, said it was based on a decision by the Eighth District Court of Appeals in St. Louis.

Crittenden County has been seeking to dismantle the abandoned bridge. The government claims it should be maintained as a secondary route in the event of a national emergency.

By LYLE C. WILSON

WASHINGTON, (UP) — There is ample evidence here that some distinguished administration insiders believe Sen. Joseph R. McCarthy is grabbing for the 1956 Republican presidential nomination. It appears, also, that the administration is not ready for an open break with the junior senator from Wisconsin.

Administration strategy seems to be based on the idea that if McCarthy is given enough rope, he will hang himself.

There is little comment on McCarthy for publication. But he is an endless subject of private discussion—a situation which is said by visitors to Washington to exist generally through the nation.

Whatever the senator's political objectives may be, these facts emerge clearly: He is the most controversial figure in the United States today. He has a very large following.

The belief that he was running for president spread widely after McCarthy's televised address last week replying to former president Truman's remarks about "McCarthyism" in connection with the Harry Dexter White espionage case.

McCarthy challenged President Eisenhower in that speech on several issues, including an alleged softness toward communism. The most widely publicized of McCarthy's challenges on policy had to do with Communism as a political issue in the 1954 congressional elections.

"The raw, harsh, unpleasant fact," McCarthy said, "is that communism is an issue and will be an issue in 1954."

Republican National Committee Chairman Leonard W. Hall had said just about the same thing earlier this month when the White case was blazing. Mr. Eisenhower was asked at his news conference about Hall's statement. Several questions were put to the President. His replies ran to several hundred words which since have been somewhat carelessly reduced by writers and commentators to a brief expression of hope that the issue of communism would have disappeared by election time next year.

Re-examination of Mr. Eisenhower's remarks shows that he made three points with respect to communism-in-government.

1. He hoped and believed firm action by the executive department would have disposed of the Communist-in-government business before the next campaign.

Court Rules Typing Name Is Not Write-in

By LEON HATCH

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — The Arkansas Supreme Court ruled today that writing candidates' name on a ballot with a typewriter does not constitute write-in voting.

The Court held, Sharp Circuit Court in ruling that Otis Carpenter is the legally elected Democratic member for Richwood township.

Defeated Candidate Wayne Orr contended in appealing the lower court ruling that the fact that the county clerk typed in all names of candidates for committeemen on the ballot constituted illegal write-in voting.

The Supreme Court held several months ago that write-in voting was not legal in certain instances. But today, the court said that typing the names of all candidates on the ballot was not write-in voting.

The decision pointed out that at the time absentee ballots were printed for the primary, names of candidates for committeemen were unknown.

The Court added that it was not called on to say whether this typing was in compliance with Arkansas election laws since Orr made no protest before the election.

Orr received a majority of the votes cast at the regular polling places, but Carpenter led in the absentee box by a wide enough margin to offset his opponent's advantage carpenter won, 120 to 123.

All members of the club are asked to leave their articles to be sold at the bazaar with Opal Hervey at Hope Furniture Company or Inez Compton at Montgomery-Ward by Tuesday December 1st.

Segregation Argued Before Supreme Court

WASHINGTON (UP) South Carolina argued before the Supreme Court today that Congress, in adopting the 14th amendment, never intended to abolish racial segregation in public schools.

Therefore, it contended, it is beyond the power of the tribunal to outlaw racial segregation on the basis of the 14th amendment.

State Attorney General T. C. Callison set forth the state's arguments in a thick brief which will form the basis for South Carolina's contention before the high bench next Monday that dual school systems are permissible under the constitution.

The court has before it five test cases brought by Negro parents against school authorities in Virginia, Kansas, Delaware, and the District of Columbia. In addition to South Carolina.

Callison's brief was also signed by John W. Davis, veteran constitutional lawyer who spearheaded the state's side of the case in oral arguments last term. The amendment which the Negroes rely forbids states to deny any citizen the "equal protection of the laws."

"The overwhelming preponderance of the evidence demonstrates that the Congress which submitted and the state legislatures which ratified the 14th amendment did not contemplate and did not understand that it would abolish segregation in public schools," Callison said.

Prayer Week Is Planned by Local Baptists

U. S. Rejects Communist Peace Idea

By VICTOR KENDRICK

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP) — The United Nations rejected a Communist plan on convening the Korean peace conference today because it would exclude Russia from being bound by agreements.

U. N. Envoy Arthur H. Dean called the Red proposal on Russia a "joke" and told the Communists the Allies would never agree on seating the Soviet Union as a "neutral" in the Korean war.

Dean called a one-day recess to give the 17 Allied nations an opportunity to study the Communist proposal though he indicated in advance he would report "a complete lack of progress."

Following his Monday meeting with the Communists, Dean hinted the United Nations might make a final concession and agree to let Russia participate with full voting rights and responsibilities and sit on neither side. Russia then would be bound by all agreements.

The Communist conference plan, an answer to Dean's 13-point proposal, made two major concessions to the United Nations.

1. The Reds suggested holding the meeting at New Delhi, India, on Dec. 28, thus dropping their insistence on Panmunjom as the conference site.

2. The Communists agreed to inviting neutral nations to participate as non-voting "observers."

Dean told the Communists the thought New Delhi might be acceptable, but Allied observers believed South Korean President Syngman Rhee would reject this proposal because he has refused to permit Indian custodial troops to set foot in his country.

The Communist proposal was the most detailed plan either side has made since the preliminary talks began Oct. 26. It included the first agenda offered by either side:

1. Prisoners of war.
2. The question of withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea.
3. Peaceful settlement of the Korean question and "other related matters."

Police Plan Final Talk With Hall

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., (AP) — St. Louis police officials planned a "death row" question and answer session today in the state penitentiary with doomed kidnaper-slayer Carl Austin Hall in a continuing effort to track down the missing $303,720 Greenlease ransom money.

The questioning will be conducted by Jeremiah O'Connell, police chief, and attorney Edward L. Dowd with the permission of federal authorities.

Hall is expected to be questioned about parts of his confession, first read at his Kansas City trial, which conflict with accounts of his arrest in St. Louis.

Lou Neal Logan
Weds Wayne Green

In a candlelight ceremony performed Wednesday, November 25, at 8 p. m., at the Hope Gospel Tabernacle, Miss Lou Neal Logan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Logan formerly of Hope, now of Mt. Vernon, Alabama, became the bride of Wayne Green, son of Mr. and Mrs. Tully Crumpler of Magnolia, with the Reverend O. M. Montgomery officiating.

The altar was flanked by four baskets of gold chrysanthemums. Gold tapers burned in branched wrought iron candelabra. Misses Shirley Shackelford and Patricia Barwick lighted the tapers. Miss Shackelford wore a blue candlelight taffeta with a garland of gold mums. Miss Barwick was dressed in blue-mink candlelight taffeta and she wore a garland of gold mums.

Mrs. Bill Morton, soloist, sang "Always." Her dress was pink bengaline faille. She pinned a corsage of white mums at her shoulder. As the couple knelt at the altar, Mrs. Maxine White, soloist, sang "Together Life's Pathway We Tread." Mrs. White wore a gown of navy tissue faille and a corsage of gold mums. Mrs. O. M. Montgomery, organist, accompanied the soloist, and played the traditional wedding marches, wearing a gown of navy and a corsage of gold mums.

The bride, given in marriage by Reverend H. J. Murry of Magnolia, chose a ballerina length gown of white moire taffeta, designed with a basque waist, full skirt and a sweetheart neckline with elbow length sleeves. Her cloche of white velvet was beaded with rhinestones and pearls. She carried a white Bible topped with pink rosebuds.

The maid of honor was Miss Lucretia Logan, sister of the bride. She was gown in navy blue taffeta made with a basque waist, full skirt and peter pan collar. Her petal half-hat was of blue velvet. She carried a colonial bouquet of white, gold and orchid mums.

Denton Bush of Hope served as best man. The mother of the bride wore a gray dressmaker suit with black accessories and pinned a corsage of gold mums at her shoulder.

The groom's mother wore navy with black accessories and a corsage of gold mums. Following the ceremony a reception was held in the Fellowship Hall of the church. The bride's table was covered with a white linen cut-work cloth. At each end of the table were burning tapers. A three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bride and groom centered an arrangement of white stock, fern and baby breath. The gift tables were covered with imported linen cloths and arrangements of white mums.

Assisting at the reception were Misses Beatrice and Hazel Abram, Mrs. A. B. Moon, Mrs. O. M. Montgomery and Misses Muzette and Hazel Daugherty.

For travel Mrs. Green added a white brushed wool topper to complete her ensemble. She pinned a corsage of pink rosebuds on her shoulder.

Mrs. Green is a graduate of Hope High School. Mr. Green is a student at Magnolia. The couple will make their home in Magnolia where the groom is employed.

Christmas is getting to be a racket.

"You were going to say that a man can't get any peace between Thanksgiving Day and the first of January and that it is a dead-end time in which everybody try to make up in 31 days for the hell they've been all year long."

"How did you?" Wilbur started to say, but Trellis Mae continued:

"You were going to say that your face got tired this time of year smiling at the boss and waiting for him to tell you how small the Christmas bonus will be."

"You were going to say that this year we might as well skip the office party, but that if we do go, well, don't worry, as you certainly don't intend to make as big a fool of yourself as you did last year, and the year before, and the year before that."

"You were going to say that Christmas is no longer so much a test of character as it is a test of endurance, and for heaven's sake, do we have to give presents to all my relatives every year to all my life, and before we even get into that argument, I will tell you the answer is yes."

"You were going to say that you asked me last January to be sure and mail our Christmas cards by the 4th of July, and you will be right now I still haven't done a

DOROTHY DIX

Dear Miss Dix: I expect to be married next year. My fiancé lives with his grandparents who own a farm. He works for them, gets his board, clothing, use of a car and a weekly allowance. His brother works in the city. Allen, my fiancé, thinks his chances of success are better in the city. I might add that he likes farm work and some day will inherit his grandfather's place. I am 19. Allen is 21, if that will help.

Raechel L.

Answer: I would say, most assuredly, that Allen's best chances for secure economic living would be at the farm. His brother's salary may sound like riches, shall he is single and has only a small financial responsibility at home. But for family care, it's not adequate. On the farm, Allen will always be assured of food and a roof over his family's head. You may lack some city comforts, but the essentials of life are at hand, save, of course, in case of grave emergencies such as drought, etc. Furthermore, it's the life to which Allen is accustomed.

Don't let a big decision like this hinge on a mere display of green

Wife of Slayer Would Keep Children

SAGAMIHARA, Japan (AP) — The wife of an Army sergeant who confessed the slaying of 9-year-old Susan Rothchild wants to return to the United States with the two Japanese girls she and her husband adopted.

"The children are my responsibility and I will see that they are taken care of," Mrs. Marie L. Schick told an Army officer who interviewed her yesterday. "Whenever anyone knocks on the door, I am afraid it is some one who has come to take the children away." Mrs. Schick said. She explained that final adoption papers have not been granted.

thing about it. Well, I haven't — so there. "You were going to say — oh, what difference does it make what you were going to say. Wilbur, tell the truth. Do you know anybody who enjoys Christmas as much as you do?"

"No, I guess not." He started reading the newspaper. A few moments later Trellis Mae put down the puzzle and started reflectively at her husband. "Wilbur, listen to me. Why is it you never talk to me? Why I never know what's going on in your mind."

Wilbur put down his newspaper. He looked at Trellis Mae's sloping, female skull with the hopeless envy of a midge gazing up at Mt. Everest.

"Women," he said, "are smarter than bears — or people."

ills. They may look tempting but they are soon gone in these days of high cost of living.

Allen should, of course, ascertain just what financial arrangement his grandfather will make with young couple on the place.

Dear Miss Dix: I've been invited to my first prom and would like to know what time I should be home. The prom will be over at 11:30, but we have been invited to a party later. Ordinarily, I must be in at 10:30 but I think this occasion deserves special consideration.

Marionne

Answer: I agree that a prom is a very special occasion and that you should be given extra privileges. If your mother knows the people who are giving the party, or nukes it her business to become acquainted with them before the event, she should be satisfied to let you stay out later.

Dear Miss Dix: I was married at 18, and since I was very unhappy with my husband, I fell in love with Dick a year later, and had an affair with him. My husband and I are separated, but not divorced. Dick hasn't asked me to marry him yet, but I'm sure if he did I could get the divorce. How can I get him to ask me?

Joanne

Answer: I hope you have something else to do while you are waiting for Dick's magnificent gesture. It'll be a long time coming, my girl, and I fear you'll be an old lady before you hear that proposal.

Dear Miss Dix: Though I'm 20, I have never succeeded in having a man friend who met with my parents' approval. We are a very close family, and I hate to offend my folks, but I fear they are ruling any chance I'll ever have to marry. I'm going with a fine man now. He's everything a girl could want — kind, thoughtful, considerate, has a good job, and is of my religion. Yet my parents won't attempt to know him better.

Selman

Answer: Much as I respect dutiful children, I feel that parents, too, should earn respect. When they forfeit it by possessively clinging to marriageable children, it's up to the young folks to rebel. Since your parents are financially and physically able to care for themselves, it selfish of them to expect you to remain home just to keep them company. Do your best to make them see reason.

CHAPTER NINETEEN

WITH AN unsteady hand Charlotte struck another match, burning her finger, to continue her search. And just then, out in the darkness something stirred, and she was something stirred, and she had the sensation she was not alone. Charlotte blew out the match and crouched beside the cabinet. The only sound was her own heart, thumping in her ears. It must have been imagination, Charlotte told make towards . . .

She had too much at stake to be a coward at this late date. Boldly she slid open the M-P drawer, fingers tumbling through it. And then the phone rang. It shrilled into the silence, it was the shrill of a knife through her nerves. She stood statue-still, eyes and ears straining like an animal's.

Someone was at the switchboard. Someone knew she was here. The switchboard was only five doors away.

Run, run for your life. Out into the store where there are places to hide under the counter covers behind dressers run legs paralyzed as in a nightmare escape ready not go.

One way out led past the switchboard room, the other back through the office. Charlotte fled into the light. For a month flying into the flame of destruction, she thought, a faintly visible target. She hurried headlong, and then she was in the dark Miss Manhattan department. Go on, keep going, into the first fitting room.

She flattened herself against the wall. Her chest hurt, and she breathed as though she'd been running for a long time. She needed to cough, and she stood struggling it down. She wanted to sit down and sob like a child at the top of her burning lungs. But she had to listen.

There wasn't a sound; silence engulfed her. It was like a pressure upon her ears. She saw her own shadow in the mirror, and for a second her heart reared again.

This wasn't true. It was a hallucination that she covered here in this cubicle, high above the streets of New York where unusual people walked free and fearless. Normal. Her behavior became more and more abnormal, didn't it? Didn't it? Somehow she must find . . .

peace and rest, somehow get back to normalcy. In an odd way it suddenly seemed peaceful here in the dark quiet. Charlotte thought she'd just like to stay here, never move her tired young body, slip to the floor, sleep.

But the phone had rung! That was real. And of course it was King, King who had deliberately puppeted her into this plight, glanced at the file cabinet on purpose, helped her plan her own plan. He waited out there—what intent? King waited well.

The elevators and stairs were all the way through the Miss Manhattan department. That's where he'd be, blocking escape. If Sam came upon him, well, after all, who had a better right to be here than the store president? He could enter by his own key, run the elevator by himself.

Sam. The thing would be to work toward the front where she could listen and watch for Sam's next trip up, then just step out calmly and say, "Oh, Sam, would you take me home now? Just wait a second till I get my wraps. Oh, good evening, Mr. Cummings."

Then even if King rode down with her, she'd be safe. Sam would let them out onto the safe street where the normal people walked. Or was it past time for Sam's eight-o'clock trip? Charlotte peered at her watch and managed to make out the figures. All those signs of time had rolled by, and it was only quarter to eight.

She couldn't miss Sam, it was a matter of life and death, she felt, that she mustn't miss Sam. . . . Charlotte began to inch out and forward; she reminded herself of April and May, the way she crept, wary and watchful, tense for defense.

April and May. She had to get even for April and May. Now she was out in the shadowy store. The mannequin loomed life-like. Charlotte went on, hugging the wall.

She stopped short, frozen by the idea that had come to her mind. There was nothing in the world to prevent King's telling the investigators he'd come back to the store because he suspected her of shoplifting, and that furthermore, he had caught her in the act. There was nothing to prevent his saying he'd found merchandise concealed . . .

on her, nothing in the world. The authorities and the public would believe an important merchant, before they'd have a working girl, a novelty.

He could say that if it suited his purpose.

Charlotte stood there, hesitant, and suddenly it seemed to her that a mannequin moved. She passed her hand across her eyes, then looked again. A mannequin—someone—old move.

Charlotte plunged forward in panic and knew the figure followed. She moved ahead toward the new vestibule elevators, and then she saw the wide-open shaft. King, instantly in his eyes. His grip was on her arm, as she struggled, holding all the figure that had followed appeared, and the three wrestled, panting.

The confusion that followed ended as suddenly as it had begun, and there was only King's awful animal cry rising, the emptiness as he hurried down the open shaft. "The last thing," Charlotte said, suddenly, "in for me to get out of here."

Through all the still chill hours she had lain here. And there was no April, no May to keep her company. Eventually she'd stopped shivering, and she supposed she had even slept a little—a neck sort of surface dozing. Not the blessed blank of real sleep. All night she had remembered. Eyes open or closed, she could see it all still.

And now the apartment furniture began to emerge as ghostly gray shapes in the black Saturday-morning dawn.

She lay listening alertly. All night she'd heard a hundred ominous sounds. Every ear was coming for her; every siren screamed her story. Every board that creaked with cold was someone harping outside her door. And all night the wild tormenting wind had seemed to sweep within her body. Her nerves were like the taut strings of a violin; one more twist of the peg and they'd snap.

The outkman, the garbage man, the paper man and come and gone, making their own normal sounds. Between times the foghorns on the river cried their warnings.

Still she waited for a knock. Surely there'd be a knock. (To Be Continued)

Cleveland Browns Win Pro Title

BY ORLO ROBERTSON
NEW YORK (AP)—The Cleveland Browns can sit back without a worry and wait for the Western Conference to decide on their opponent in the National Football League championship game Dec. 27.

The Browns, a four-time champion in the defunct All-American Conference, wrapped up their fourth straight division title in the NFL yesterday with a 27-16 victory over the winless Chicago Cardinals. It was the 10th straight win without a defeat for the Paul Brown-coached eleven. They'll meet the New York Giants in Cleveland Sunday and wind up the season Dec. 13 in Philadelphia against the Eagles.

Detroit's Lions, conquerors of the Browns in last year's title game, head the Western Conference by only a one-game margin over the San Francisco 49ers. The Lions' 6-2 cemented their position on league championship game Dec. 27.

The Browns, a four-time champion in the defunct All-American Conference, wrapped up their fourth straight division title in the NFL yesterday with a 27-16 victory over the winless Chicago Cardinals. It was the 10th straight win without a defeat for the Paul Brown-coached eleven. They'll meet the New York Giants in Cleveland Sunday and wind up the season Dec. 13 in Philadelphia against the Eagles.

Detroit's Lions, conquerors of the Browns in last year's title game, head the Western Conference by only a one-game margin over the San Francisco 49ers. The Lions' 6-2 cemented their position on

But yesterday the 49ers stayed within a striking distance with a 33-21 decision over Baltimore's Colts. The day's activities, however, virtually eliminated Los Angeles from the chase since the Rams were supplanted by the Chicago Bears 24-21, the Eastern Conference title. The Cardinals, who have only a tie to fence for the first time this season for 10 games, were leading 14-13.

Probers Ask Laws to End Tax Fraud

By B. L. LIVINGSTONE

WASHINGTON, AP—Hard and fast laws to prevent Treasury Department favoritism and political meddling in federal tax collections was demanded today by House investigators.

The Ways and Means subcommittee, in the fourth installment today of a final report on two years of investigating tax fraud and irregularities, recommended:

1. Enactment of changes in the internal revenue code to curb authority of the secretary of the Treasury over actual administration of the tax laws to "prevent political meddling in the future."

2. Giving the internal revenue commissioner direct authority over tax collections in all matters not involving national fiscal policy.

The report observed: "Corruption, of course, is possible at any level of government, but political influence conceivably would be less strongly felt by career employees of the bureau than by politically appointed Treasury officials."

"If the Treasury no longer has ultimate control over personnel questions or like matters personally affecting bureau employees, Treasury officials will possess less power to influence what should be impartial administrative decisions in the bureau."

Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey announced Nov. 19 that he had delegated full authority to the Internal Revenue Service for handling individual tax cases, while re-

PRESCOTT NEWS

John A. Davis Honored

Friends of Mr. John A. Davis called at his home on Tuesday afternoon to wish him happiness on his 57th birthday anniversary. The rooms were decorated with arrangements of vari-colored chrysanthemums placed at points of interest.

Coffee and cake were served from the dining table overlaid with a white damask cloth and centered with a white birthday cake. Mrs. Clarke White, daughter of Mr. Davis, assisted in courtesies. Mrs. John P. Cox of Hope was an out of town guest.

Victory Club Meets in Home Of Mrs. Roy Loomis

The Victory Home Demonstration Club met in the home of Mrs. Roy Loomis with Mrs. Claud Cox assisting hostess for the November meeting.

Mums in graceful arrangements decorated the rooms.

Mrs. Loomis, president, presided. The meeting was opened with the song "What a Friend in Jesus" followed with the devotional based on Psalm 23 that was given by Mrs. Loomis.

Mrs. Burke Shelton read the minutes and gave a financial report. Plans were discussed for a Christmas family party.

Mrs. Madge Burgess gave a resume of the meeting conducted by Miss Clara Grimes. She also showed colored slides of the 4th Club House at Fayetteville.

A delicious dessert course was served to fourteen members.

Mrs. Duncan McRae Hostess To '37 Club

Mrs. Duncan McRae Jr. was hostess to members of the 13th Contract Club at her home on the Roston road.

Bronze and gold mums decorated the rooms arranged for the players and a horn of plenty filled with nuts and fruits centered the dining table. The Thanksgiving motif was further stressed in the score cards and napkins.

Mrs. J. R. Bemis won the high score award.

Bridge guests were Mrs. Al Williams, Mrs. W. G. Bensberg, Mrs. H. H. McKenzie, Mrs. Jim Nelson, Mrs. R. P. Yarbrough, Mrs. Henry, tea guests Mrs. Edward Bryson and Mrs. Carl Dalrymple. Members present included Mrs. Gilbert Swain, Mrs. O. G. Hirst, Mrs. C. H. McSwain, Mrs. Tom Bemis, Mrs. Ralph Gordon, Mrs. A. V. Renner, Jack Harrell, Mrs. John Pittman and Mrs. George Christopher and Mrs. Bemis.

Mrs. R. S. Thornton of Little Rock was the guest last week of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Halton of Mr.

serving policy decisions to the Treasury. He said it will cut duplication and delay.

This handing down of power, accomplished gradually, gives Internal Revenue Commissioner T. Coleman Andrews authority to make final agreements on tax disputes, among other things.

POWERHOUSE—In his spare time, Franz Vogel, a Munich, Germany, watchmaker, has put together what he believes is the world's smallest electric motor. Vogel is shown at work on his invention, which measures four millimeters in diameter and is much smaller than a wrist watch. A one-volt direct current drives the device's miniature ivory propeller, which makes 1000 r.p.m.

Haltom and Mrs. Haltom, Patricia and Carolyn accompanied her home on Friday returning Saturday.

Mrs. R. P. Hamby has returned from Baton Rouge, La. where she was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Alfred E. Smith III and family. While there she attended the christening of her new grand daughter, Irene Royston Smith, at the First Presbyterian Church and the christening robe was worn by her grandmother, Mrs. Hamby, and mother the former Miss Irene Hamby.

Mrs. Watson White Jr., and Mrs. Lillie Butcher have returned from Kermitt, Texas where they visited Mr. and Mrs. Emond White and family and Dallas where they were the guests of friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wingfield have had as their guests Mr. and Mrs. David Luck and Rebecca of Little Rock and Miss Elizabeth Luck of New York City.

Mrs. R. P. Hamby and her guests, Mr. and Mrs. John Wathen, John Randolph and Mary Lawrence visited relatives in Fulton on Friday.

Mrs. Adrain Jean and Mrs. Harry Moore of Hope were the Thursday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Gordon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Haynie, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Boles spent Wednesday in Little Rock with Mr. George Haynie who is seriously ill at the Veterans Hospital.

Miss Betty Lou Davis, student at Henderson State Teachers College, Arkadelphia, and William Ed Davis who attends East Texas State, Denton, Texas spent the Thanksgiving holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Granville Coleman and Carol have returned to Memphis after a holiday visit with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Coleman.

Sid Purdie attended the seventh annual meeting of stockholders of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis, at the Jefferson Hotel in St. Louis last week.

Probers Plot Strategy to Unearth Spies

WASHINGTON, (U) — Senate investigators mapped new strategy for unearthing Red spies in past Democratic administrations today as Republicans and Democrats traded blows on the spies-in-government issue.

The senate internal security subcommittee will meet Wednesday to decide whether to accept the Canadian government's terms for interviewing Igor Gouzenko, former Russian code clerk who exposed a wartime Communist spy ring in Canada.

The Canadian government has ruled that it must have the final decision on what the subcommittee could make public after questioning Gouzenko. Sub committee Chairman William E. Jenner (R., Ind.) has objected to the stipulation.

Secretary of State John Foster Dulles Saturday refused Jenner's request to ask Canada to back down on its latest stand.

Chief Counsel Robert Morris said the inquiry will proceed regardless of the subcommittee's decision and the group will question a number of witnesses in secret hearings. He gave no indication of what the group is seeking from the witnesses.

Ickes' Diary Tears Apart FDR, New Deal

By ED CREAUGH

WASHINGTON, AP—Harold L. Ickes, who seemed never to hold his tongue for any man while he lived, has come up with some tart opinions of the New Deal and Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The "Old Curmudgeon" found the New Deal, of which he was a moving spirit, spendthrift with the taxpayers' money and headed by a man he felt he couldn't trust. Roosevelt's secretary of the interior wrote in 1936 that he had been "sold down the river" by the President.

Ickes regretted, in fact, that he had not walked out of Roosevelt's Cabinet a year before.

He felt there was a "very real chance" he could have been nominated by the Republicans to run against Roosevelt. And he thought that, if nominated, he probably would have won.

These opinions — sharply challenged by over-enthusiasts toward Russia, longed by onetime Democratic Na-among others — came to light in "The Secret Diary of Harold L. Ickes," of which a first 700-page installment will be published tomorrow (Simon & Schuster, $6).

Ickes reveals that, for all his misgivings about Roosevelt, the President's wife and chief adviser, and in spite of his own secret presidential hopes, he stayed on as a New Deal stalwart because he feared the Republicans would deliver the country to big business if they got the chance.

Ickes died early last year and the six-million-word diary he kept under lock and key is only now being released piecemeal by his widow — censured, at that, to spare the feelings of the living from some of Ickes' more sulphurous comments.

This day-by-day record pictures the first four years of the New Deal as dominated to a large extent by struggles for power among such officials as the late Harry L. Hopkins and the then secretary of the Treasury, Henry Morgenthau.

One surprise, Ickes says, then Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace Jr., later much criticized.

In one sarcastic passage Ickes wrote that soon he would expect to see the First Lady's young grandchild-party at any time was the silliest thing he ever heard.

In the first Roosevelt administration.

It was after Roosevelt did not back him in an expansion of the Interior Department, to take in all conservation activities, that Ickes lamented he had been "double-crossed."

He quoted Rep. Dempsey (D-N.M.) as saying it would have been hard to impeach the late Sen. Henry Long (D-La.) for calling the President a liar since Long might well have proved it. And he goes on:

"It is pretty tough when things like this can be said about the President of the United States and when members of his own official family and his own party in Congress feel that he cannot be relied upon."

As for Mrs. Roosevelt, Ickes complained bitterly that she kept meddling in government affairs, especially his. He accused her, along with Hopkins, who ran the Works Progress Administration, of spending money "like a drunken sailor."

When asked, Mrs. Roosevelt declined comment on the book. In one sarcastic passage Ickes wrote that soon he would expect to see the First Lady's young grandchild-party at any time was the silliest thing he ever heard.

Paper Names Benson Arkansan of Year

LITTLE ROCK, AP—The Arkansas Democrat has named Dr.

George S. Benson, president of Harding College at Searcy, as "Arkansan of the Year" for 1953.

Each year the Little Rock afternoon newspaper conducts a poll among its readers to select these two honorary positions, as well as the two outstanding Little Rock citizens.

Named as the "Greatest Little Rockian of the Year" was Dr. A.H. Sparks, Mrs. Edgar F. Dixon, a member of the Little Rock School Board, was named "Greatest Little Rock's Woman of the Year."

Issuing orders to his staff, "Unfortunately," he grumbled, "they can't write yet."

It was after a run-in with Roosevelt that Ickes wrote he'd been approached, in 1935, with the idea of quitting the Cabinet and going after the GOP nomination.

"I would have had as good a chance as anybody else," he wrote. "Of course I know in my heart I would not have been nominated because I would not have made the terms necessary to secure the support that I would have needed. But if I had been nominated, in all probability I could have won."

That was the year Roosevelt carried every state except Maine and Vermont.

Ickes later reported he had some support for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1936, in New York, commenting on the diary.

He said the idea Ickes could have been nominated by either the First Lady's young grandchild-party at any time was the silliest thing he ever heard.
